

Vision Boards

To me the vision board represents a place of thoughts for present, past and future. A world unlike our own where imagination runs wild.

Some vision boards may represent dreams, feelings or traumatic events.

It is all relative to the mind of the beholder and no single mind is ever wrong in this discovery or realization.

What we often behold in the here and now, may not quite be sending the same message as we may come to believe.

The Surrealist Viewpoint

To be surreal means to me that you alter the entire idealism of what one views. So say i'm looking at a modern cube with rectangles. If one were to alter the landscape and change the view, i might be looking at Circles within circles.

Surrealists like M.C. Escher have spent a great deal of time adding details to their works of art.

This artist demonstrates surrealism, by combining one creature within another. I find the piece fascinating to behold due to the simplicity and volumes of feelings it invokes.

CREDITS

M.C. Escher picture courtesy of his Official website.

The wolf picture is courtesy of fineartamerica.com

The vision board with the mermaid is courtesy of www.erinpavalina.com

The second vision board courtesy of Rae Hight. wordpress.com